What is the Difference between the Cambridge Preparation Program and the General English Program?

There are three areas in which the Cambridge Preparation program differs from the General English Program:

1. Recognition: The Cambridge Exams are recognized around the world by educational institutions and employers. It is an accurate test because it focuses on language production- using the language not just understanding it.
2. Intensity: The program is more intensive, covering more materials in a shorter period of time. Students receive more homework. Students work with one teacher and one set of classmates over 9 -12 weeks. The length of the program aids students in developing their skills in all 5 skill areas. GV does not allow late entry or early departures in this program.
3. Student Motivation: Most of the students who take this program are highly motivated to take the exam. . Expectations from students are high and students who do not do homework or keep up with their studies are asked to leave the program.
